TENNIS COURTS

THE location of Beach Haven, near where New Jersey reaches farthest into the Atlantic, is unique and most attractive. The town is situated on a slender island, extending from Barnegat southward twenty-one miles to Egg Harbor Inlet; washed on the eastern side by the ocean and on the other by beautiful Little Egg Harbor Bay, whose sheltered waters six miles in width separate the island from the mainland.

The Baldwin is the only hotel at this place surrounded by its own grounds and having an unobstructed view of both ocean and bay.

The Pennsylvania R. R. bridges the bay four miles above Beach Haven, running through trains, with Pullman service, in two hours from Philadelphia ; and from New York by connection with the Central R. R. of New Jersey and the Pennsylvania, in two and one-half hours.

Beach Haven is a resort for refined people ; besides churches, drug and other stores there are upwards of 100 private cottages, and season after season, many well-known residents of the larger cities make it their summer home.

There are no "side shows," merry-go-rounds, dance pavilions, music halls, or anything else to attract and hold the excursion element. For women and children the place is an ideal one.

The borough has recently installed the most improved type of acetylene gas plant, and much attention has been given to making Beach Haven a well lighted town. The gas is also largely used for cooking purposes.

Beach Haven has long been recognized as the leading resort for lovers of sailing and fishing. A sail of forty miles north to Bay Head, or Atlantic City eighteen miles south, without going "outside" on the Atlantic Ocean, tells part of the story of its attractiveness to the yachtsman ; and the long-famous catches of fish, including Weak, Blue, Sheepshead, Bass and Rock, bear full testimony of its popularity for the angler. Crabbing parties and those in search of oysters and clams are fully rewarded by large catches.

Boats for sailing and fishing can be had at all times in any number under the control of careful masters, with fixed reasonable charges. Yachting on the bay can be indulged in by the most timid, absolute safety being assured ; a record of not one accident of any kind happening since the Beach Haven Yacht Club was formed some years ago warrants this statement. For those who prefer the ocean, the run through the inlet to the open sea is all that can be desired. The sea bathing at Beach Haven is unsurpassed on the Atlantic coast, the beach being hard and clean, with a remarkably fine surf, perfectly safe for women and children. The Baldwin bath houses and their attendants insure every comfort for the bather. For the guests of the Baldwin who prefer them, hot and cold sea water tub baths are provided.

To the sufferers from Hay Fever, too much can not be said of the advantages of Beach Haven for their relief, being six miles from the mainland and its dust, with entire absence of plant pollen, relief is always afforded and permanent cures have been numerous. To the thousands who have been cured or benefited by a stay at Beach Haven we refer for corroboration of this statement.

The Hotel Baldwin, the largest and most thoroughly equipped hotel in Beach Haven, is under the direct management of its owner, the Estate of Chas. T. Parry, and every detail which tends to making the guests comfortable will receive careful attention from those whose every interest is to make the Baldwin sustain its past excellent reputation.

BATHING IN FRONT OF THE BALDWIN

During the past winter extensive improvements have been made, in keeping with the policy of the owners to have a hostelry thoroughly up-to-date, among which is the installation of several additional private baths supplied by a new system of plumbing carrying both fresh and salt water. The other baths in the house have been renovated and equipped with the most improved plumbing furnishing sea water. A new water tower bearing a tank of large capacity has just been erected, which insures an abundant quantity of exceptionally pure water from two artesian wells each 600 feet in depth. This together with new furniture, a complete electric lighting plant, and the house thoroughly renovated, the coming season will be the greatest of the many successful ones the Baldwin has enjoyed.

Special mention must be made of the extensive covered porches elevated ten feet from the ground, nine hundred feet long by sixteen feet wide, affording a most delightful promenade and a charming view of both ocean and bay.

The table and all that pertains to good living shall receive special attention, the management fully appreciating the importance of having proper food well served as a means of making permanent friends. Sea food in its fullest variety will be a feature of the bill of fare.

The Baldwin ball room is finely located in the hotel with a perfectly laid floor for dancing. A competent orchestra will be in attendance to furnish popular music for the dance and concerts.

ON THE BEACH

Billiards, Pool, Bowling Alleys, Shuffle Boards, all in first-class order, afford pleasure to the guests. Cottillions, card parties, billiards and other tournaments will be under the care of competent people.

A Baseball Diamond and Tennis Courts adjoin the Hotel Baldwin, and will demand attention from admirers of these sports.

Gunning at Beach Haven is quite popular.

Shore and wading birds are found in great numbers on the meadows and low lands. Mud hens after September 1st attract numbers of sportsmen, and Plover, Yellow Leg and Snipe in their season afford fine shooting.

MUSICAL—YACHT AND GUN CLUB GROUNDS

The Corinthian Yacht and Gun Club of Beach Haven, the membership of which is made up of many well known residents of the adjacent cities, has lately completed a spacious and handsome club house on grounds near by the Hotel.

The club has as its chief purpose the promotion of yachting and gunning, but has done much to create an active interest in the many other pleasant features of the resort. The races and shooting tournaments scheduled for the coming summer will be well worth witnessing.

The Baldwin will remain open from June until October, and its rates to guests shall always be in keeping with the ideas of the management to have popular prices consistent with good living and careful attention to the wants of patrons.

Special rates for June and September, and for those desiring to make season or monthly stays.

Beach Haven has always been a popular resort for young people. Many college men spend their summer vacations at the hotels and cottages, taking a most active interest in the existing sports and creating many original means of entertainment for themselves and others who witness the "sneak box" races, obstacle races, swimming contests and other aquatic sports.
